of which is closed with double-locked doors. The inner wall is punctured by many small round holes to permit the water to run over the clothes within the tub compartment, but the other wall, an inch or two away, is solid to keep the warm suds within the machine. The whole cylinder, with its four-tub compartments, revolves slowly first in one direction and then the other, thus turning the washing over and over to loosen the dirt. Rinsing is done in the same machine after three or four different suds have been used. Altogether, linens and clothes are cleaned by 11 separate waters, thus insuring complete cleanliness.

Wearing apparel sent in family rough-dry bundles and turkish towels are the only types of laundry that are dried thoroughly. Water is removed from all work to be finished by use of rotating or whirling dryers. For the un-ironed clothes and towels large machines resembling the cylindrical washing machines are used. These rotating machines have both an intake and outlet for fresh air and are heated to speed the drying process. Like the washing machines they have two walls, the inner one punctured to permit the circulation of hot air within the machine. For clothes and linens to be ironed the whirling water extractors are used, but the clothes are removed while still damp enough for ironing. Clothes in need of starch are starched before drying, and those with iron stain are whitened with a harmless salt solution.

Flatwork is all ironed by one of two large mangles through which the linens pass some 20 feet over a canvas belt between the rollers. Two workers stand on one side of this machine to feed it and two on the other side to fold the linens as they come out.

Wearing apparel is ironed first on small machines, similar to the steam presses to be found in cleaners' establishments, and is finished with an ordinary heat-controlled hand iron. Shirts, by reason of their number, are all handled by a crew of six girls who, with the aid of eight machines and three hand irons, finish 90 shirts an hour. Each girl using machines operates two of them at a time, alternately. The machines work somewhat automatically, one opens when the other closes. The first two machines iron cuffs and neckbands in one operation, the second two shape the collar and iron the fronts; the third two do the backs and sides, and the fourth two the sleeves. Finishing on the sleeves and shirts is done by one of the three hand-ironers, who also fold the shirts on a cardboard and bind them with paper bands.

Clothes in need of buttons or mending are marked with paper clips and sent to the girl whose machine sews on buttons, or the woman who mends and patches rents or holes.

Sorting for return bundles is as complicated as marking. The mark index is again used in the process, at which the workers become very adept and swift. Linen table cloths are all wrapped in blue tissue paper, while sets of napkins are returned to their owners tied together with colored ribbon. The finished packages are wrapped in heavy blue paper and sent to the delivery trucks.

Hotel work, because it is usually marked by the owner, and because of the large number of pieces, is done at a wholesale price and is not handled in the same way the family work is.

Silks and woolsens sent to the Torrance laundry receive special care, being washed in cold water and with cocoanut oil soap solutions.

Torrance was chosen as the home of this large institution also because of its proximity to so many metropolitan and residential areas, according to Rojo.

TORRANCE WOMAN'S CLUB MEMBERS HEAR FEDERATION LEADER

"Negligent citizens and corrupt public servants prepare the community soil in which civic goodness wilts and gang evils flourish," stated Miss Josephine Seaman, state president of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, at the joint luncheon meeting of the Torrance, Hermosa Beach, Manhattan Beach, Redondo Beach and El Segundo Woman's clubs, given yesterday noon at the Surf and Sand club in Hermosa Beach in her honor.

Stressing the necessity of organized women's groups continuing their united efforts toward "freeing the living soil of the state from the alkali of injustice and the sourness of discontent," Miss Seaman pointed out that the objectives of federated club women today are as they always have been "to build a fairer, more just, and happier social and industrial life for the American people by preparing a soil locally and nationally in which neither Communism, Fascism, Nazism, nor any other non-Americanisms can grow and flourish."

The California Federation of Women's Clubs is unique in that it is not a specialized group, but one in which various factors are represented, especially problems of the P. T. A., A. A. U. W., and B. and P. A.

Musical numbers on the program were presented by Mrs. R. B. Pettiford, of Hermosa Beach, who sang three numbers to the piano accompaniment of Mrs. William Niland; and Miss Vera Travis, violinist, who presented four selections. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Emma Schultz Travis.

Among the 175 persons present were Mrs. E. M. Johnston, president of the Torrance club; Mesdames Paul Watson, Marie Beale, Thelma Higgins, Emma Briney, Julia Neelands, Alda Hudson, J. Hartley, Carrie Parks, James Crumrine, George Nahmens, Minnie Brooks, Mary Siedotham, Ruth Rogers, Elma Gutley, J. C. Merriam and Caroline Collins.

Outstanding Southland club leaders who attended include Mrs. Grace Y. Hudson, district president; Mrs. W. W. Wilkenson, past president of the Hermosa Beach Woman's Club, who acted as chairman of the day; Mrs. Allen Dible, district secretary; Mrs. B. Day, Mrs. John S. Thayer, Mrs. John Q. Adams, and Mrs. C. H. Turner, president of the California State Parent Teachers Association.

Officers of the Harbor District Chambers of Commerce met Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hyde, 1465 Hickory, to discuss their program for the coming year. Before the meeting, dinner was served with the valentine motif being carried out in decorations. Red and white color predominated in candies and sweet pea flowers.

Covers were placed for Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walton, of Compton; Messrs. Charles Bland, Ray O. Baldwin, of Long Beach; Leslie Mott, of San Pedro; Dan Holland, of Compton; A. E. Henning, of San Pedro; Fred Pimm, of Bell; Bill Rosencrans, of Los Angeles; Hugh Johnson, of Gardena; Loren Howe, of Hawthorne; Thomas Blair, of Redondo Beach; and Rufus Page, of Torrance.
